History of Faculty of Law and Political Sciences in University of Szeged

The Faculty of Law at the University of Szeged traces its origins to the University of Kolozsvár, founded in 1872 by Emperor Franz Joseph I in present-day Cluj-Napoca, Romania, as part of a four-faculty institution including law. After the Trianon Treaty in 1921, the university relocated to Szeged, where it continued to develop, eventually becoming the Ferenc József University before adopting the name University of Szeged in 1944. The Faculty of Law has since grown into one of Hungary's leading law schools, known for combining theoretical education with practical training and offering diverse programs in Hungarian and foreign languages.

He was celebrated for his extensive work on European and Hungarian legal history, including his role in compiling and annotating the collection of Hungarian municipal legal regulations from 1885 to 1902. His other main research area was bankruptcy law.

Mihály Bockhor (1877–1920; Head of the Department from 1917 to 1920) was a Hungarian-Romanian legal historian and canon law jurist, known for his scholarly work on the historical development of ecclesiastical law in Central Europe. Besides, he was an expert of the legal education.

István Ereky (1876–1943; Head of the Department from 1921 to 1924) was the first professor in legal history in University of Szeged. He made significant contributions to the field of administrative law, focusing on local government autonomy and the development of public administration systems. His extensive research included works like "Public Administration and Self-Government".

Béla Iványi (1878–1964; Head of the Department from 1927 to 1938) He focused on medieval legal history, which he researched on the basis of sources from the Middle Ages. He processed and published the material of several family and town archives (e.g. Bártfa, Gönc, Eger), and his source publications are still valuable sources for Hungarian urban history research.

György Bónis (1914-1985; Head of the Department from 1940 to 1957) was an internationally recognised legal historian, who specialised in the study of medieval Hungarian law and feudal legal institutions and the history of criminal law in the 18th century. He is credited with the discovery of the first proposal for a Hungarian criminal law based on archival sources.

Pál Maday (1914-1992; Head of the Department from 1957 to 1965) His scientific interest was mainly drawn to the study of local history, especially the history of the country towns (oppidum). His best works in this field are "The History of the Towns and Villages of Békés County" and "The History of Szarvas".

Ödön Both (1924-1985; Head of the Department from 1965 to 1985) was an associate professor at the Faculty of Law of the University of Szeged, who conducted outstanding research on the history of Hungarian criminal law and freedom of the press. Among his major works are the textbook "The Establishment of the Press Law of 1848" and the textbook "The Universal History of State and Law", which he co-authored.

Árpád Tóth (1927-2008; Head of the Department from 1985 to 1988) His academic interest was directed towards the study of exceptional power of the government. From the period of dualism to the end of the First World War, he investigated the nature and application of this exceptional legal institution in public law practice.

József Ruszoly (1940–2017; Head of the Department from 1989 to 2005) was a distinguished Hungarian legal historian and university professor, renowned for his extensive contributions to the study of constitutional and legal history in Hungary and Europe. He served as a professor at the University of Szeged, where he headed the Department of Legal History from 1988 to 2005, and played a pivotal role in shaping legal education at multiple Hungarian institutions, including the universities of Miskolc and Debrecen. József Ruszoly authored over 700 publications, including influential works such as „The Legal History of Europe” and „Electoral adjudication in Hungary 1848-1948”, which remain key references in the field.
